The Minority Health and Health Disparities Graduate Certificate Program will allow you to:

- ❖ Gain the academic foundation for eliminating racial and ethnic health disparities;
- ❖ Learn how to conduct community based interventions and use the appropriate methods of research in minority health and health disparities;
- ❖ Mobilize communities where health disparities exist; and
- ❖ Advocate for public health policy and culturally tailored programs for minority populations.

Required Courses for the Graduate Certificate Program include:

- BCHS 2524: Overview of Minority Health and Health Disparities;
- BCHS 2559: Community Development Approaches to Public Health;
- BCHS 2526: Health Disparities Research: Methods and Interventions
- BCHS XXXX: Integrative Seminar.

Sponsored by the Center for Minority Health and the Department of Behavioral and Community Health Sciences

This is a 15-credit graduate certificate program open to all GSPH students, university graduate students, and university students in a health and science program.
